Giants, Yanks and Robins Practically to Stand Pat on 1916 Players.

McGRAW LOOKING AHEAD

Many Players Taken South as Future Prospects—Robby Seeks a Catcher.

By FRIDERIC G. LIEB.

There will be only a few prizes awarded on the training camp of Pop McGraw's three ball teams, but they will be well worth striving for, as probably one or two of the local clubs will figure in the next world's series.

The managers of the three local clubs are standing pat. McGraw, Donovan and Robinson all have veteran straight bats. McGraw built up his club during the latter part of last season, largely on veteran stars purchased or procured in trades from other clubs—Hendry, Zimmerman, Sallee and McCarthy—and with that combination stood the league on its feet last September, when the Giants closed off their twenty-six straight games and established a new major league record. Naturally McGraw does not figure to tinker much with a club which saved off twenty-six straight.

A year ago the Yankee camp was full of experiments. After the most searching and systematic combine of the major leagues ever attempted, McGraw practically had the cream of the minor leagues to select from. That the scouts did their work well may be gleaned from the fact that Hildreth, Walters, Morridge, Alexander, Russell and Hendry passed all big league tests with honors, and Love, Hendry, Miller, Pyle, Rose and Pippin were regarded as bright possibilities. In addition to going into the minors the Yankees bought wisely from the Athletics and the Federal League, and Baker, Shawkey, Magee, Cullop and Gedeon proved most valuable assets.

Accidents Costly to Yankees.

This new blood being to the survivors of the 1915 team—Pipp, High, Caldwell, Fisher, Numanaker, Maisei and Baumann—formed a combination which had a comfortable lead in the strong American League in early August, when accidents stripped the club of all its stars and forced it into fourth place. There is not a person connected with the club from Ruppert to the bat boy who does not think accidents deprived the club of a sure pennant. It is therefore not hard to see that McGraw will try again with his early 1916 lineup.

Brooklyn has a championship team. It is true the National League championship team was made to look rather sick when the Dodgers engaged in their little fracas with the Red Sox last fall, but they are champions of the oldest league in existence just the same. On the whole, the Yankees are unlikely to make many changes, but there probably are more opportunities for the young men on the Brooklyn club than with either the Giants or Yankees.

Several weeks ago the writer wrote the Giant youngsters would have plenty of opportunities, as the club had practically no substitutes. Veteran players like McGraw added veteran players for outfield and infield utility duty. The veteran Jack Murray, after a whirl around the International League, has been recalled to the majors and will act as first aid to Burns, Kauff and Robertson.

Wagner to Sub in Infield. To help Robert substitute for the infield the Giants procured Joe Wagner, a local boy from Cincinnati for the waiver price. Joe has been on and off the Red Sox for several years, and is an International League veteran. He is not particularly strong at bat, but a pretty fielder. With Robert, whose contract has another year to run, he will form a reserve for the infield.

In the outfield Jim Thorpe will likely be retained for utility work in addition to Murray. Thorpe hit near 300 in the American Association last season, and the league in stolen bases. At any rate the Giants must keep the Indian now or let him go. He has been let out on options for the last two years, and McGraw cannot be sent out on options a third time.

It may therefore be asked, why does McGraw take forty-five players to camp, the largest army in the history of the game? The answer is that the Giants are a team of veterans, and veteran teams often have the edge. Neither is John McGraw well satisfied with his pitching staff. Sallee, Tetreau and Benton all have their best years behind them.

Preparing for 1916.

McGraw is taking his big army South not for 1916 but for 1917 and 1918. Therefore it behooves every youngster to show all he has. Several of the young players already have been promised to minor league clubs, but these fellows can show something they will be back in the big show. Holke first went south with the Giants in 1915, and when McGraw needed him last fall he was ready.

Nineteen pitchers will be taken to Marlin, though the men who will actually pitch are already known. Jim Middleton, who won a championship in Louisville last season and was considered the best pitcher in the minors, is depended upon for regular duty. The Giants paid a high price for his release, so he will be given every opportunity to show his worth. Middleton is not a spring chicken either. He is 27 years old, and has pitched in the majors for several seasons. In the event Donovan decides to pass him up, Hinton says he will try to find a place for the Cuban on any other big league club, as he appears convinced Angelo is a big leaguer.

Donovan Has Fine Pitching Staff.

There may be a fight on for outfield utility men between Miller, Hendry and Robertson. Two of these players will be retained. Miller was a great hitter in the minors and a beautiful fielder, but he never hit anything with the Yankees. Hendry takes on weight fast, and is not as good a ball player in the field or on the bases as Miller. Hendry hit .290 with the Yankees last season. In 1915 Miller beat Hendry for the batting championship of the Southern Association by a single point. Robertson hit .325 in Richmond last season, but does not seem to be very fast on the bases. Despite the fact that he cracked out 164 hits in 149 games in Richmond he stole only thirteen bases.

Few Openings With Yankees.

About the only real contest at the Yankee camp will be between Maisei and Gedeon for the honor of playing second base. If Maisei can field the position at Marlin he will get the job, but he is wanted for his ability to get on and his base running.

There are only eight players in the Yankees party who were not with the club in Macon last spring, and three of them are very green, with no minor league experience. One of these is Bobby McGraw, a young college kid who attracted attention pitching for the University of Colorado, and the other Alec Ferguson, a 19 year old kid from Bloomfield Catholic League team, also a pitcher. Then there are two picked up in the south, catcher, Julian Olson from Pensacola.

Four others were obtained by purchase or draft. Pitcher Ed Monroe, from Memphis; Catcher Ben Shaw, from Early Start Often Helps.

An early start does not necessarily help a team, though frequently a well trained team in the spring gets off to such a fine start that it is hard for other teams to catch up. It is interesting to note that the two world's champion Red Sox team was one of the last teams to reach its training camp last spring.

Both Managers McGraw and Donovan have been in the South for some time. McGraw always likes a fortnight to look over his youngsters, though this season he will have close to thirty-five men in the first squad. Bill Donovan is a firm believer in long training for his pitchers, and believes a pitcher should have six weeks of training to be in shape for the opening season. During those six weeks, Wild Bill's pitchers should get the jump on the other slabs of the American League, the same Wild Bill.

CRICKETERS TO COOPERATE.

For the purpose of determining the personnel of the All-New York eleven which is to compete in the Halifax cup series of the Associated Cricket Clubs of Philadelphia this season the New York and New Jersey Cricket Association decided at its annual meeting at Motor Hotel yesterday to cooperate with the Metropolitan League and the Van Cortlandt Park League. There will be a special match for the benefit of the British Red Cross Society at Livingston, Staten Island, on May 30.

Major League Training Season Opens To-morrow

Major League Training Season Opens To-morrow

By SHORTSTOP.

After a busy winter of strikes and rumors of strikes the training season is again upon us. To-morrow in three points as wide as the breath of the nation—Macon, Ga.; Marlin, Tex.; and Palestine, Tex.—the ball players of the Yankees, Giants and Cubs, respectively, will start to take the kinks out of their arms as the first preparation for the 1917 season.

Within the next week or ten days about 500 big league players and aspirants for big league honors will be busy at work all through the South, and the training season will be in full swing. Even before the era of Pirate championships—1901, 1902 and 1903—the Buccaneers patronized Hot Springs. However, after fourteen straight seasons in the first division, Pittsburgh now has spent three straight in the bottom half of the pennance table, and Dreyfus recommended a switch in order to try to change the club's luck. Manager Jimmy Callahan thereupon selected Columbus, Ga.

Washington gives up its joke training camp at Charlottesville, Va., and will pitch its training camp at Augusta, Ga. It is the first time the club has trained away from Charlottesville since Clark Griffith has been managing it. The weather always has been so kind there that it has retarded any kind of training. Two years ago the Senators were snowed out of their training camp in the first Washington club in either the American or National League which ever finished a season in the first division. After that all of Griffith's Washington teams finished in the first division until he was crowded out last year. Griffith then thought it was best to leave for Charlottesville, as it had lost its charm.

Teams Has Five Camps.

The Giants are about to begin their tenth consecutive training season at Marlin, which is the longest any club has ever stuck to the same camp, with the exception of Pittsburgh in Hot Springs. As the Giant club has built its reputation on the fact that it will likely train there indefinitely. Just ten years ago the Giants trained in California.

For the first time in years the Yankees are returning to the same town for the second year in succession. The Yankees have shifted training camps even more often than they have changed managers. In the last six years the club has trained in as many places, Athens, Ga., in 1911; Atlanta, Ga., in 1912; Bermuda, in 1913; San Antonio, Tex., in 1914; Savannah, in 1915 and Macon, in 1916. As the club has spent considerable money in fixing up a fair house and in the building of a new clubhouse, it looks as though Macon may be made a permanent training camp.

Texas leads in training camps, with five, as the Giants, Cardinals, Tigers, White Sox and Browns will train within a few days of each other in Macon, Ga. and Florida will each entertain three teams. The Yankees, Washingtons and Pirates will do their conditioning in the Chickasaw State, while the Cubs and Athletics will train in the land of flowers.

Louisiana and Arkansas each get two teams, though the latter State will have it all over the former in the class of its visitors. The lowly Reds and the Cleveland Indians will train in Louisiana, while Arkansas gets the champions of the two leagues, the Red Sox and Dodgers. California will pay its respects to Weeghman's Cubs.
